

Home Visiting in Washington State

Home visiting is one of the best ways to meet the needs and change the trajectory of Washington State's youngest and most vulnerable children and their families.

Home Visiting: A Two-Generation Approach

High-quality home visiting is a proven way to support and strengthen families in those foundational first years of life. Working together, trained home visitors and parents talk about prenatal care, infant care, child development and parenting skills. As a result, children are healthier and better prepared for school; parent-child bonds are stronger; and abuse and neglect are less likely.

The power of home visiting comes from the relationship and trust between the home visitor and the parent. For many parents, this relationship gives them the strength to leave abusive relationships, go back to school or find a new job that helps them better provide for their family. Home Visitors also provide valuable connections to other community services and ensure coordination of resources.

Who We Serve

More than 2/3 of the families enrolled in our home visiting programs are experiencing poverty at or below the Federal Poverty Level.

60% of caregivers served were racial groups recognized as experiencing disproportionate impact of adverse outcomes.

1 in 3 primary caregivers are employed full-time or part-time.

Home Visiting Works

Rigorous research continues to prove the short- and long-term benefits of home visiting. While outcomes vary depending on the model used, home visiting is proven to result in:

Healthier Births

Improved Parenting Practices and Parent-Child Relationships

Reduced Child Abuse and Neglect and Need For Child Welfare Services

Early Detection of Health Issues and Developmental Delays

Increased Preschool and Kindergarten Readiness

Reduced Crime or Domestic Violence

Improved Family Economic Self-Sufficiency

Improved Coordination and Referral for Other Community Resources

Home Visiting Services Account:

Investing in Washington Families

In 2010, the state Legislature created the state's Home Visiting Services Account (HVSA) to expand high-quality services to our most vulnerable families by bringing together and leveraging public and private funding sources. The HVSA funds a portfolio of home visiting models to help meet the diverse needs of families and communities. The HVSA has made Washington State a national leader in home visiting.

Home Visiting Services Prioritize Families with Certain Risk Factors:

- Teenage parents
- Underserved populations
- Homeless families
- Families with multiple young children between birth to age 5 not currently connected to early learning resources

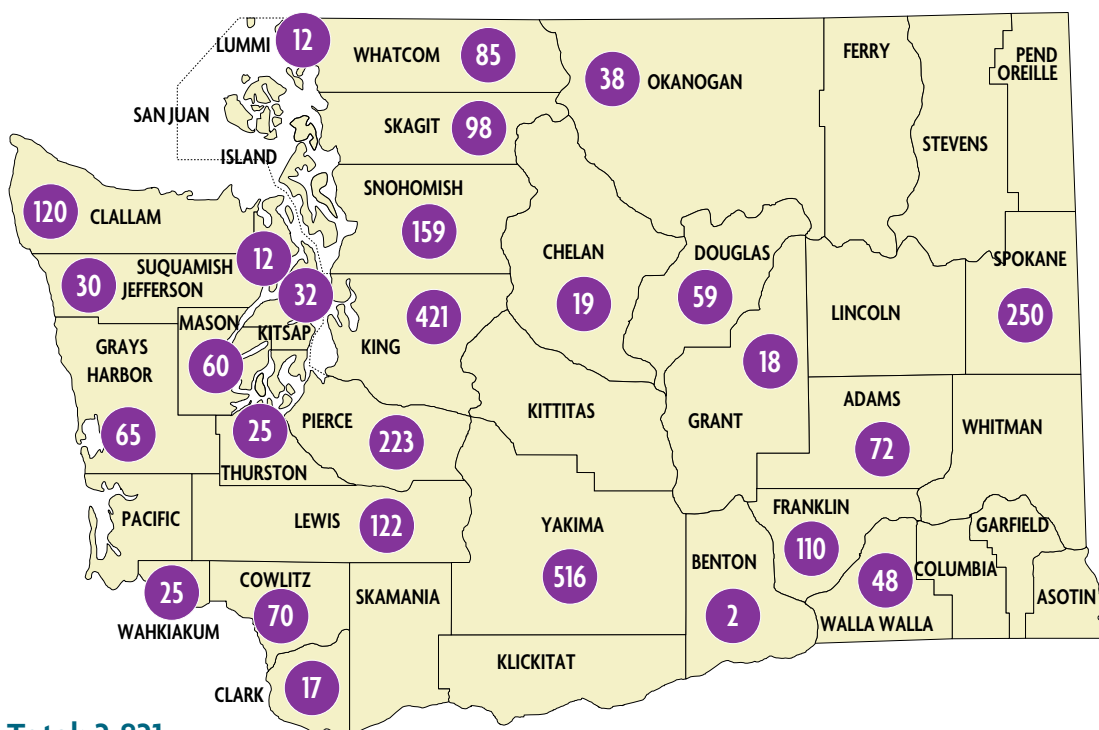

More than 80% of children receiving home visiting services through HVSA funding are under age 3.
